MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF CESI EUROPE ACADEMY

EN

On behalf of the board of the CESI-Europe Academy, I am delighted to welcome you to Copenhagen on the occasion of the symposium 'New working rhythms and their impact on health and safety at work'.

In Dublin in 2015, our work gave us a better understanding of the role of information and consultation of workers in restructuring processes. In December 2015, an agreement was struck on a European level to guarantee this right to all employees of central administrations in Europe. This agreement sets forth the compulsory nature of consultation, namely for all issues relating to health and safety at work.

Restructuring and new employment arrangements represent psychosocial risks for workers. In a time where unemployment is high, workers who retain their jobs suffer from a heavier workload and increased psychosocial risks. Stress is the second most commonly reported work-related health problem. It affects 22% of EU workers and it is on the rise. Absenteeism carries a considerable cost. Investing in health and safety at work (OSH) is now a concern, both on a national level and on the European one.

However, despite the success of the OSH Strategy and the remarkable work performed by both Eurofound and EU-OSHA, there still remains a great deal of work to be done. The second European Survey on Enterprises (including public sector companies) on New and Emerging Risks (Esener-2) has concluded that in Europe, one company out of five deals with difficult clients or users or with time constraints, in addition to not having access to the information and tools necessary to manage the risks incurred. The Survey also concluded that only one third of the companies have an action plan in place to prevent work-related stress.

Moreover, it is important to continue helping public administrations in the set-up of awareness-raising and psychosocial risk prevention systems that form part of an overall policy to manage occupational risks and which is integrated into the social dialogue.

To continue the awareness-raising and appropriation tasks on these subjects is a given for CESI and its members.

This is why CESI has arranged this project in 2016, which has materialised into two seminars in Copenhagen and Madrid, as well as a study aiming to highlight five best OSH-related practices in public administrations as preventive measures in connection to occupational health and safety.

In Copenhagen, our work will focus on new work rhythms. At a period of great changes, our relationship with time has taken on a different nature. New information technologies are blurring the frontiers between people's professional and personal lives.

There are currently few studies on the impact of the digital market on occupational health and safety. Telework brings some advantages (better work-life balance) but also some disadvantages (lack of control over work hours, risk of burnout, isolation, etc.). One of the countries that applies the "home office" system the most is Denmark (24% of the surveyed companies use this system, compared to 13% on average in the EU).

This is the context in which this symposium will endeavour to shed, with the help of experts and practitioners. With their support, CESI considers it necessary to consider the implications of these new working patterns that have historically mobilised unions and have had a significant impact on the daily lives of workers.

I would like to take this occasion to thank the representatives of the Danish TU organisations Frie Funktionærer et Krifa for their support in preparing this project, and I wish everyone a stimulating symposium!

BOTSCHAFT DES PRÄSIDENTEN DER CESI-AKADEMIE EUROPA

Im Namen des Verwaltungsrats der CESI-Akademie Europa freue ich mich, Sie in Kopenhagen zu dieser Fachtagung mit dem Titel „Die neuen Arbeitsrhythmen und ihre Auswirkungen auf die Gesundheit und Sicherheit am Arbeitsplatz“ begrüßen zu dürfen.

Im 2015 in Dublin konnten wir dank unserer Arbeit die Wichtigkeit von Information und Konsultation von Arbeitnehmern in Zeiten der Umstrukturierung besser verstehen. Im Dezember 2015 wurde eine europaweite Einigung erzielt, um dieses Recht allen Arbeitnehmern in den europäischen Zentralverwaltungen zu garantieren. Diese Einigung sieht unter anderem vor, dass die Konsultation verbindlich ist, insbesondere bei Fragen hinsichtlich der Gesundheit und der Sicherheit am Arbeitsplatz.

Die Umstrukturierungen und die neuen Arbeitsmodelle haben Auswirkungen im Hinblick auf psychosoziale Risiken der Arbeitnehmer. In Situationen, wo viele Menschen keine Arbeit haben oder diese verlieren, sind andere, speziell die, die ihre Arbeit behalten durften, einer größeren Arbeitsbelastung und größeren psychosozialen Risiken ausgesetzt. Der Stress ist am Arbeitsplatz das zweitgrößte bekannte Problem. 22% der Arbeitnehmer innerhalb der EU sind davon betroffen und die Zahl steigt. Krankenstände bedeuten Kosten. Aus diesem Grund ist es wichtig, künftig in die Gesundheit und die Sicherheit am Arbeitsplatz (GSA) auf nationaler sowie auf europäischer Ebene zu investieren.

Trotz des Erfolgs der europäischen Legislativstrategie der GSA und der ausgezeichneten Arbeit der beiden europäischen Agenturen Eurofound und EU-SSHA, bleibt noch viel zu tun. Aus der zweiten europäischen Umfrage der Unternehmen (darunter auch jene des öffentlichen Sektors) zu den neu aufkommenden Risiken (Esener-2) geht hervor, dass sich jedes fünfte Unternehmen in Europa mit schwierigen Kunden/Nutzern oder zeitlichen Einschränkungen konfrontiert sieht und nicht über Informationen und Mitteln verfügt, um dieser Lage Herr zu werden. Diese Untersuchung hat ebenfalls ergeben, dass nur ein Drittel der Unternehmen über einen Aktionsplan zur Stressprävention am Arbeitsplatz verfügen. Auch ist es wichtig, die öffentlichen Verwaltungen weiterhin bei Maßnahmen zur Sensibilisierung und Prävention von psychosozialen Risiken zu unterstützen und diese in eine globale Politik der berufsbedingten Risikokontrolle sowie in den sozialen Dialog einzubinden.

Es ist für die CESI und ihre Mitglieder ganz selbstverständlich, auf dieses Thema aufmerksam zu machen und Maßnahmen auf diesem Gebiet zu unterstützen.

Genau aus diesem Grund hat die CESI für das Jahr 2016 dieses Projekt organisiert: zwei Fachtagungen (in Kopenhagen und Madrid) und eine Studie zur Schilderung fünf bewährter Verfahren innerhalb der öffentlichen Verwaltungen zum Thema Prävention in Zusammenhang mit Gesundheit und Sicherheit am Arbeitsplatz.

Hier in Kopenhagen werden wir uns auf neue Arbeitsrhythmen konzentrieren. In Zeiten tiefgreifender Veränderungen ist das Zeitverhältnis durcheinander gekommen. Auch verschwimmen mit den neuen Informationstechnologien die Grenzen zwischen dem Berufs- und Privatleben.

Über die Folgen des digitalen Marktes auf die Gesundheit und Sicherheit am Arbeitsplatz weiß man noch wenig. Die Telearbeit stellt Vorteile (bessere Vereinbarkeit von Berufs- und Privatleben) aber auch Nachteile (schlechte Arbeitszeiteinteilung, Burn-out-Risiko, Isolierung etc.) dar. Dänemark ist eines der Länder, das das „home office“ am meisten nutzt (24% der befragten Unternehmen, während der EU-Durchschnitt bei 13% liegt).

Somit zielt diese Fachtagung darauf ab, zu diesem Themenkomplex Experteninformationen und Berichte aus der Praxis einzuholen.

Auf Grundlage derer ist es der CESI wichtig, eine Diskussion zu den Auswirkungen neuer Arbeitsrhythmen zu führen, die die Gewerkschaften seit jeher mobilisiert haben und die einen großen Einfluss auf das alltägliche Leben von Beschäftigten haben.

Schlussendlich möchte ich den Vertretern der dänischen Mitgliedsorganisationen Frie Funktionærer und Krifa herzlich für ihre Unterstützung bei der Vorbereitung dieses Projekts danken und wünsche Ihnen allen eine anregende Fachtagung!

MESSAGE DU PRÉSIDENT DE LA CESI-ACADÉMIE EUROPE

FR

Au nom du Conseil d'Administration de la CESI-Académie Europe, je me réjouis de pouvoir vous accueillir à Copenhague à l'occasion de ce colloque intitulé 'les nouveaux rythmes de travail et leurs impacts sur la santé et la sécurité au travail'.

En 2015, à Dublin, nos travaux nous ont permis de mieux appréhender le rôle de l'information et de la consultation des employés en période de restructuration. En Décembre 2015, un accord a été trouvé au niveau européen pour garantir ce droit à tous les employés des administrations centrales en Europe. Cet accord prévoit, entre autres, que la consultation est obligatoire notamment pour toute question relative à la santé et à la sécurité au travail.

Les restructurations et les nouvelles organisations de travail ont un impact en termes de risques psychosociaux sur les travailleurs. Dans un contexte où tant de personnes sont sans emploi ou perdent leur emploi, la charge de travail et les risques psychosociaux s'accroissent notablement pour ceux dont l'emploi a été maintenu. Le stress est le deuxième problème de santé lié au travail le plus dénoncé. Il touche 22% des travailleurs de l'UE et ce chiffre va croissant. L'absentéisme a un véritable coût. Investir dans la santé et la sécurité au travail (SST) est désormais une préoccupation tant au niveau national qu'europpéen.

Or, en dépit du succès de la Stratégie législative européenne de SST et du remarquable travail effectué par les deux agences européennes que sont Eurofound et EU-OSHA, beaucoup reste à faire. La deuxième Enquête européenne des entreprises (y compris celles du secteur public) sur les risques nouveaux et émergents (Esener-2) a conclu qu'en Europe, un établissement sur cinq est confronté à des clients ou usagers difficiles ou à des contraintes de temps et indique ne pas disposer des informations et des outils dont il a besoin pour gérer ces risques. L'enquête a également conclu que seul un tiers des établissements dispose d'un plan d'action pour prévenir le stress lié au travail.

Aussi, est-il important de continuer à aider les administrations publiques à mettre en place une démarche de sensibilisation et de prévention des risques psychosociaux qui s'intègre dans une politique globale de gestion des risques professionnels et dans le dialogue social.

Continuer le travail de sensibilisation et d'appropriation est un réflexe pour la CESI et ses membres.

C'est dans ce but que la CESI organise en 2016 ce projet qui se décline en deux colloques et une étude visant à mettre en lumière, cinq bonnes pratiques d'administrations publiques en termes de prévention liée à la santé et à la sécurité au travail.

A Copenhague, nos travaux se concentreront sur les nouveaux rythmes de travail. A une époque de profondes mutations, le rapport au temps est chamboulé. Les nouvelles technologies de l'Information rendent également plus floues les frontières entre vie professionnelle et vie privée.

Les impacts du marché numérique en termes de santé et de sécurité au travail sont encore peu étudiés. Le télétravail peut offrir des avantages (meilleure conciliation vie professionnelles/vie privée) mais peut présenter des inconvénients (manque de maîtrise du temps de travail, risque de burnout, isolement, etc.). L'un des pays qui recourent le plus au 'home office' est le Danemark (24% des établissements interrogés contre 13% en moyenne dans l'UE).

Tels sont les enjeux abordés lors de ce colloque, avec les éclairages d'experts et de praticiens.

Fort de leur soutien, la CESI estime nécessaire de réfléchir aux implications de ces nouveaux rythmes de travail, qui ont de tout temps mobilisé les syndicats et qui ont un impact important sur la vie quotidienne des travailleurs.

Je tiens ici à remercier les représentants des organisations danoises Frie Funktionærer et Krifa qui nous accueillent et vous souhaite, à toutes et à tous, un très bon colloque !

Emilio FATOVIC, Président de la CESI-Académie Europe

LIST OF SPEAKERS

Barbara DE CLIPPEL

Head of Communication and Press Relations, Federal Public Service for Social Security, Belgium

Barbara de Clippel has been head of the communication service at the FPS for Social Security since 2009. In her previous capacity as programme manager for communication and change, she was involved in the NoVo (culture shift) project within the FPS. She was part of the team which won the 'HR team of the year' award in Belgium in 2010.

An organisation's strength comes from within.

It can be found in the talent of the people who work for the organisation, in their enthusiasm and their commitment to moving forward together. These are values that the Federal Public Service for Social Security wholeheartedly supports. This involves switching from the previous 'command and control' to an era where trust, teamwork and empowerment take centre stage. Barbara de Clippel tells the story of an organisation which created an authentic and open culture where time registration is no longer mandatory, where people can work from home, where people can work in a dynamic working environment, where self-managing teams are set up, where values and participation are placed front and centre... the list goes on.
